WHAT IS DOING IN WASHINGTO

Political Life at the Capitol As It Appears to Our Regular Correspondent

Other cities like San Francisco and New Orleans may contend for the prize of an international exposition lasting from May to November, but the capital of the United States is in a perpetual state of exposition and growing more interesting year after year. As transportation facilities im prove, as population grows, as wealth increases, Washington becomes more and more attractive and more and more the Mecca of hundreds of thousands of pilgrims. During the past week the Daughters of the American Revolution were in session at their beautiful temple facing the plaza south of the White House. The president addressed them in language in which flattery and irony vied with each other, but so deftly veiled that it is doubtlful if the dear ladies knew all he was thinking. It is as good as comic opera to see this convention in full session, the stage banked with flowers and flowers bedecking the monstrous hats of two thousand ladies in the audience, beautiful maiden pages in beautiful gowns moving about on the stage and through the halls everything suggestive of elegance, wealth and vanity. The roll call resurrects the names of Mrs. Martha Washington, Mrs. Lucy Jefferson. Abigail Warren, Lucretia Hamilton and many other names that carry one back to that golden period of our history when, since the historical school books do not say otherwise, everybody was patriotic, honest and good. Well, long live illusion and down with hobble skirts!

His speech was respectfully listened to by democrats and republicans alike, but did not arouse enthusiam in either party. His words were twisted by Mr. Pickett of Iowa in a following speech to show that the democratic party was urging the reciprocity agreement with the ulterior hope that it would lead to free trade.
